The Public Defender's Office is moving to the City Hall Annex on Laura Street.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. -- The Public Defender's Office will be saving the city some money by moving, a process that started Monday.

The city currently pays nearly $70,000 a month to rent office space on Market Street.

On Monday afternoon, the office started moving to the City Hall Annex on Laura Street. The move will save the city $67,000 a month in lease costs.

The new office is also three blocks from the new courthouse, which is slated to open next spring.
